Directions: There are three passages in this part. Each passage questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A,B,C and D. You should decide on the best choice and blacken the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet.

Passage 1

Questions I to 5 are based on the following passage:

Country music star Kenny Rogers, known for classics like "The Gambler" and "Islands in the Stream", died Friday night. He was 81. He died of natural causes at home in Sandy Springs, Georgia.

During his six-decade career, the popular singer sold more than 100 million albums worldwide, won three Grammy Awards, and was given a place in the Country Music Hall of Fame. (76) He also published several photography books, donated time and money to noble causes, appeared in a number of made-for-television movies, and launched a restaurant chain.

Kenneth Donald Rogers was born in Houston on Aug. 21, 1938. The fourth of Edward and Lucille's eight children, Rogers grew up in a government housing project. He was the first person in his family to receive a high school diploma.

"As early as elementary school, I began to see music and singing as a relief from all the awkwardness and embarrassment of growing up poor, shy and often an outsider," Rogers wrote in his 2012 book, Luck or Something Like It: A Memoir. He entered his first talent contest when he was 10. His version of "Lovesick Blues" won him the grand prize: a half-gallon of ice cream and a meeting with a country music star.

In high school, he formed a vocal group called the Scholars. They recorded a few forgettable songs, then went their separate ways. As a solo artist, Kenneth Rogers recorded a song called "That Crazy Feeling" which was released to the public.

In 1959, jazz pianist Bobby Doyle heard Rogers play at a club and asked him to join the Bobby Doyle Three as a bassist (贝斯手) and harmony singer. Rogers wasn't a bass player but signed on anyway. The group disbanded (解散) in the mid-1960s. By then, Rogers had "learned how to be a musician from Bobby Doyle," as he wrote half a century later.

Passage 2

Questions 6 to 10 are based on the following passage:

When Ella's owners escaped from their home, they weren't able to take the dog with them. But as wildfires raced through, Ella stood to watch at the only house that was still standing in the neighborhood.

(77) Ella stayed in the ruins for almost two days. The family wasn't sure if Ella would survive the flames. But a family friend told Ella's owners, Mike and Leahna Copsey, that he'd seen her standing guard outside their neighbor's house.

The Copseys' neighborhood was almost completely destroyed by the Camp Fire, the deadly California wildfire that started on Nov. 8, 2018. The death toll (死亡人数) was 71, and more than 1,000 missing persons had been reported.

As for Ella, the dog is now living with Kayla Westman, the Copseys' eldest daughter. Westman has created a GoFundMe page where visitors can make donations to help her pay for Ella's medical bills. So far, she's raised $175 of a $650 goal to help Ella, who suffered burns in the fire.

"Like many other animals that have been affected by the Camp Fire, Ella is one of them. After going through the fire we are very lucky to have her back with us," Westman wrote on the GoFundMe page. "And while her bills have already been discounted(打折) for fire victims, it's still adding up quickly. Already spending $250, any little bit helps for the future visits we will be making."

The family also said that a local animal protection society has provided food, toys and a bed for Ella. (78) Still, even though Ella is safe, the family is without a home. A separate GoFundMe page for the Copseys says that the family has "lost everything in this fire."

Passage 3

Questions 11 to 15 are based on the following passage:

Last week, Seth Priebatsch, the CEO and founder of SCVNGR, wrote a post encouraging young people with entrepreneurial aspirations (创业愿望) to drop out of college. (79) He may be right, but that makes me sad.

I've been worrying about Priebatsch's "drop-out" advice because for the most part, I think it's terrible counsel. As a parent who pays two college tuitions, I'm a strong believer in the importance of higher education not just because I think degrees will help my kids get good jobs, but because the college experience is making them better, smarter, and more interesting people. (80) They have the rest of their lives to start companies if they choose to do that, but when else will they be free to study art history, read great books, learn to write well, or become fluent in another language? And from a more practical perspective, they're creating relationships with classmates and professors that will benefit them personally and professionally for a lifetime.

Entrepreneurship(创业) as a career path is now widely popular and it's my view that this generation will emerge as the most entrepreneurial generation in history. But colleges and universities are way behind the curve on this trend. Sure, there are now over 400 distinguished professors in graduate and undergraduate entrepreneurship programs with more than 200,000 students, according to the Kauffman Foundation. But if you're well on your way to starting a company as a freshman, a class or two in entrepreneurship is not going to keep you happy and it's probably not going to help you grow your company.

Here's my solution: colleges and universities need to come up with a whole new curriculum(课程设置) for young entrepreneurs so that they can continue to learn the skills they need to succeed in business but still enjoy the resources that higher learning offers.

11. Which of the following is the main idea of the passage?

Spring is the season when kind-hearted people mistakenly take thousands of wildlife babies from their mothers. It is important to know how to help 56 hurting. The best way to make sure 57 an animal is truly motherless or not is to wait and check it for a period of time. Animals often 58 to be abandoned but are not.

Rabbits fed their young only 59 dusk and dawn, which is probably why you never see them. If the babies are fat and warm, they are being 60 good care of. If you are unsure, place some strings or sticks 61 the entrance of the nest. If the sticks are later disturbed, the mother has 62 to feed her young.

A lot of baby birds fall out of the nest. If they are not injured, it is safe to put them 63 into the nest. The mother will not 64 the babies even if you touch them. Birds 65 are learning to fly are often found on the ground, and the mother looks after them there. If a bird nest falls 66 in a storm, you can make a new one 67 making a few holes in a plastic butter container, Nail the "nest" as 68 as you can on the same tree, and place the uninjured baby birds in it. The mother will often come back home in a day.

In spring, it is common for mother deer to 69 their babies alone for most of the day to protect them. The baby deer has no scent (气味). It can lie in the grass and 70, because animals that kill and eat them hunt mostly by scent. If you see a Baby deer all alone, this is 71. Do not take it away from its 72 place.

The bottom line is that natural mothers provide best care and survival training for their babies. 73, if the animal baby is obviously injured, its mother has been 74 by another animal, or you have seen the baby's 75 worsen over a couple of days, you should bring it to a wildlife protection center.
